

COVID-19

All,

Beginning Monday March 23rd, Utilicom will be moving to a tele-work platform. Communications and Traffic Management are industries that are, “critical infrastructure” and “essential”, so we will be open to supply and service materials to both industry segments. We also recognize the need to do all that we can in order to slow the spread of COVID-19 and keep our employees and their families safe. These are unprecedented times, and the measures we put into place today will hopefully get us all back to a normal healthy life soon.

Daily Operations:

The warehouse is open for will call pick ups and our delivery trucks will be running as normal. Our sales team is working as normal from the office or via-telework, so you should not see any change from that aspect. Our sales group can be contacted via email, and/or phone, so you should not see any change.

Procedure changes:

If you are picking up material from the warehouse, we ask that you please send only one person inside to retrieve material, or simply call ahead and we will begin getting material together for you when you arrive. Please enter the building from the back where you pick up material, and we will get you loaded, and on your way, as quickly as possible. Deliveries will go on as usual. These procedure changes are being implemented solely to limit the amount of personal interaction for the safety of everyone during the day.

Material deliveries:

While Utilicom will be making deliveries as usual, we do anticipate delays from our manufacturers. The supply chain is still up and running in terms of local logistics companies delivering, but parts coming from China and companies across the country are being delayed. However, we have word from our manufacturers in California that they are open and will be working to stay on schedule as best as they can. That is good news. All, materials and parts are, as of today, going to be available. We carry a very large amount of inventory, so we will be able to supply our customers during this challenging time.

Please scroll to the next page to see a list of salespeople & technical support and their contact information.

Be safe through these challenging times.
